"MONEY IS ESSENTIAL IN OUR LIVES"

When the prehistoric man existed, the way to get some food from others was exchanging goods. Later, the coin was introduced and with capitalism, money has become a limitless world of possibilities. However, do we really need it?

Money rules the world as we all know but, what if we get rid of it? Currently, money's value is a matter that concerns few people, most of them share-holders. We don't pay 1 $ for a kilo of tomatoes, we pay what they want. This has led to a situation where desensitized people, who have money to burn, impose their own laws.

We don't realize that the consumer, the guest, has the power. We can ^{make} overthrown an unethical company best by not purchasing its products. We have to raise awareness that money is something untouchable, abstract, and the only value it has, is the one that we give to it.

To sum up, as far as I am concerned, money has turn into something that only benefits big and wealthy companies. It is only essential for them in order to survive. Nevertheless, of course we can subsist without it. If money were something more controlled, our planet would be a better place.
